STUDENT RESEARCH SPOTLIGHT

Recent Graduate Shay Magahey Publishes New Research

Shay Magahey

Recently graduated Atmospheric Sciences major Shay Magahey's paper, Isolating the effect of biomass burning aerosol emissions on 20th century hydroclimate in South America and Southeast Asia, has been accepted for publication in Environmental Research Letters. Environmental Research Letters is a peer-reviewed, open-access, scientific journal covering research on all aspects of environmental science and is published by the Institute of Physics.

Magahey conducted this research alongside UGA Atmospheric Sciences professor, Dr. Gabriel Kooperman, as part of his Earth System Modeling Research Group. Magahey and Kooperman's research aims to "evaluate the mechanisms by which biomass burning aerosol contributed to decreased tropical precipitation, with a focus on South America and Southeast Asia." Their results "demonstrate that higher concentrations of biomass burning aerosol increases the quantity of cloud condensation nuclei and cloud droplets, limiting cloud droplet size and precipitation formation," among additional findings.

Dr. Gabe Kooperman

Magahey graduated from UGA in December 2022 and is now a PhD student in the Bren School of Environmental Science and Management at the University of California, Santa Barbara (UCSB). At UCSB, Magahey plans to conduct research utilizing climate models to understand the processes that drive changes in future El Nino events under climate change.

TA AWARDS AND OPPORTUNITIES

- Future Faculty Fellows Program: this year-long, cohort-based program is ideal for experienced TAs who have demonstrated a commitment to teaching excellence and who are entering the last two or three years of their terminal degree program. Applications are due Friday, October 13th.
- GradTeach Certificate: this non-academic certificate is designed to support graduate students to engage effectively in their instructional development. Register today!
- GradTeach Workshop Series & TA Cafés: We have four more graduate student workshops this semester, and two more TA Cafés (hosted by and for graduate students). See our Fall Workshops flyer for details. Students can also sign up for our GradTeach Listerv and Newsletter for up-to-date information on all our programs.

General News and Announcements

The Graticule Weekly is distributed each Friday Afternoon. If you have any news or events you'd like to share throughout the semester, please share them with Matt Calonius well in advance.
